PARENTING WITH LOVE AND LOGIC
To all the parents and children (including our own!) who were my teachers, and to my wife, Hermie, who gave support.

— Foster

To my wife, Shirley, whose love, support, and wisdom have always been a source of motivation and strength.

— Jim
Contents

Foreword to the Second Edition xi
Introduction 1

Part 1: The Love and Logic Parent
1. Parenting: Joy or Nightmare? 5
   Are We Having Fun Yet? 7
   Putting the Fun Back into Parenting 8
2. Mission Possible: Raising Responsible Kids 9
   Ineffective Parenting Styles 11
   The Effective Parenting Style of Love and Logic 15
   The Paradox of Success and Failure 16
   Learning at Affordable Prices 18
   To Protect Them Is Not to Love Them 20
   Responsibility Cannot Be Taught 21
3. Responsible Children Feel Good about Themselves 23
   I Am What I Think You Think I Am 24
   The Three-Legged Table of Self-Concept 26
   The Difference between Praise and Encouragement 32
   Positive Self-Esteem Comes from Accomplishment 34
   If We’re Happy, They’re Happy 36
4. Children’s Mistakes Are Their Opportunities 39
   Mother, Please, I’d Rather Do It Myself 40
   You Have Your Troubles, I Have Mine 41
   The Two Rules of Love and Logic 44
   Problem, Problem, Who Owns the Problem? 49
5. Setting Limits through Thinking Words 53
   Building Walls That Don’t Crumble 54
   How to Talk to a Child 57
   The Threat Cycle 59
   We’d Rather They Think than Fight 62
   Mean What You Say, and Say What You Mean 64
6. Gaining Control through Choices 67
   Parenting Just Gets More and More Curious 67
   The Right Dose of Control 69
   Waging a Winnable War with Choices 71
   The Bad Boy in Burger King: A Case Study on Winning a Control Battle 77
   Choose Your Choices Carefully 83
7. The Recipe for Success: Empathy with Consequences
   Hurting from the Inside Out  87
   Naturally Occurring Consequences  88
   Imposing Consequences  91
   Consequences Don’t Have to Be Immediate  92
   It’s the Empathy That Counts  94

8. Lights, Camera, Parenting!
   Practice, Practice, Practice  97
   What Love and Logic Is Not  98
   It’s Never Too Late to Start  104

Part 2: Love and Logic Parenting Tools
How to Use Love and Logic Pearls  106
1. Allowances/Money  107
2. Anger: When It’s Appropriate  110
3. Bedtime  112
4. Bossiness  115
5. Bullying and Cyberbullying  117
6. Car Wars: Back-Seat Battles  121
7. Chores  125
8. Church: When Kids Don’t Want to Go  128
9. Creativity  130
10. Crisis Situations  133
11. Discipline 101  135
12. Discipline in Public  139
13. Divorce and Visitation  141
14. Eating and Table Manners  149
15. Entitlement  152
16. Fears and Monsters  156
17. Fighting  158
18. Friends  161
19. Getting Ready for School  163
20. Giving Gifts  167
21. Grades, Underachievement, and Report Cards  170
22. Grandparents  175
23. Homework  178
24. “I’m Bored” Routine  180
25. Lying and Dishonesty  182
27. Pacifiers  186
28. Peer Pressure  188
29. Pet Care  191
30. Picking Up Belongings 193
31. Professional Help: When to Seek It 196
32. The Room: Keeping It Clean 197
33. The Room: Keeping the Kid in It 199
34. Sassing and Disrespect 202
35. Spanking 204
36. Sports 206
37. Stealing 210
38. Swearing and Bad Language 212
39. Teacher and School Problems 214
40. Technology: The Internet, Phones, Pornography, Television and Videos, and Video Games 216
41. Teeth Brushing 234
42. Telephone Interruptions 236
43. Temper Tantrums 238
44. Toilet Training 240
45. Values: Passing Them On to Your Kids 242
46. Whining and Complaining 245

Appendix A — The Three Types of Parents 247
Appendix B — Turn Your Word into Gold: The Art of Enforceable Statements for the Home 248
Notes 250
Index 251
Authors 259
Foreword

We have been gratified to see the response that the world has given Parenting with Love and Logic and Parenting Teens with Love and Logic. Parents on six continents—all except Antarctica—have effectively embraced Love and Logic concepts. During these years since the first edition, we have happily collected success stories of parents who excitedly and proudly told us of raising their children with choices, consequences, and empathy, as taught in Parenting with Love and Logic.

While sales have continued to increase, it is apparent that the world has changed in many ways since the books were written. In those days, there was no instant messaging, no talking to strangers in chat rooms, no computer games. Toddlers didn’t own plastic toys that took turns spouting off the alphabet, tutoring children on naming colors, and helping them learn to spell. Yet no matter the generation, good parenting boils down to loving and effective parent-child relationships and communication that engender respect and self-discipline.

Our goal has not changed, but this edition includes information on how parents can specifically handle the new challenges our children face.

We thank the parents who have told us how the principles here have helped them raise children who are equipped to make good decisions and who are loving, responsible, and fun to be around. We also thank those who have given us ideas and suggestions, some of which have been included in this edition.

Foster Cline and Jim Fay
Introduction

For hundreds of years, rookie parents learned the fine points of child-rearing by example: They took the techniques their parents had used on them and applied them to their own children. Today this approach is more apt to bomb than boom.

Many of us, when we meet failure in parenting, throw up our hands in frustration and say, “I can’t understand it. It worked for my dad!” Yes, it did. But things have changed. The human rights revolution, the communication explosion, the internet, cell phones, changes in the nuclear family—these and many other factors have radically changed how our children view life. Kids are forced to grow up more quickly these days, so they need to learn sooner how to cope with the tremendous challenges and pressures of contemporary life. The impact of rising divorce rates, single parents raising kids, blended families, and other changes in the family has been dramatic. Parents must learn to use different techniques with kids who live in today’s complex, rapidly changing world.

That’s where Parenting with Love and Logic comes in. Why the terms love and logic? Effective parenting centers around love: love that is not permissive, love that doesn’t tolerate disrespect, but also love that is powerful enough to allow kids to make mistakes and permit them to live with the consequences of those mistakes. Most mistakes do have logical consequences. And those consequences, when accompanied by empathy—our compassionate understanding of the child’s disappointment, frustration, and pain—hit home with mind-changing power.

This book is written in two parts. In the first, we will lay out our concepts on parenting in general terms, centering on building self-concept, separating problems, neutralizing anger and arguments, using thinking words and enforceable statements, offering choices, and locking in our empathy before our kids face the consequences of their mistakes. These are the building blocks of effective parenting. Part 1 also contains extra tidbits of information—“Love and Logic Tips”—which add flesh to the bone of many Love and Logic principles.

In the second part, we get practical. The forty-six Love and Logic pearls offer everyday strategies for dealing with problems most parents will face during the first twelve or so years of their children’s lives. These pearls build on the general ideas developed in the first half of the book and should be used only after the first part has been read and understood.

Parenting with Love and Logic is not a foolproof system that works every time. No system can promise that. But it is a system that has a strong chance of working in most situations. Although Love and Logic is not a comprehensive system, it is a complete system. That is, although we have not written a thick tome containing every detail of parent-child relationships, how best to handle almost every issue can be gleaned from these pages. Parents will find success using the Love and Logic attitude. Once the attitude is mastered, handling most problems becomes second nature, even when a particular problem has not been explored. Our approach is more of an attitude that will allow our children to grow in maturity as they grow in years. It will teach them to think, to decide, and to live with their decisions. In short, it will teach them responsibility, and that’s what parenting is all about. If we can teach our kids responsibility, we’ve accomplished a great portion of our parental task.

The Bible provides insight on many parenting issues. Much of what this book teaches is summarized beautifully in a familiar Old Testament proverb:

Train children in the right way,
and when old, they will not stray. (Proverbs 22:6)

What greater gift can parents give their children than the opportunity for a joyful, productive, and responsible adult life? We believe that the principles of Parenting with Love and Logic will help achieve that result.
PART 1

THE LOVE AND LOGIC PARENT
A mother and father stand outside of a restaurant in the rain asking their three-year-old, Chloe, to get in the car so the family can go home. Chloe refuses. Her parents spend the next fifteen minutes begging and pleading with her to do it on her own. At one point, the father gets down on his knees in the puddles, trying to reason her into the car. She finally complies, but only after her parents agree to buy her a soda on the way home. If they have to use a soda to buy her off at three, what will they be facing when she reaches sixteen?

Jim sits in the airport awaiting a flight, watching as a mother gives at least eighty different demands to her three-year-old boy over the course of an hour without ever enforcing one of them:

“Come back here, Logan!”
“Don’t go over there, Logan!”
“You better listen to me, Logan, or else!”
“I mean it, Logan!”
“Don’t run, Logan!”
“Come back here so you don’t get hurt, Logan!”

Logan eventually finds his way to where Jim is seated. The toddler smiles at him while ignoring his mother. The mother yells, “Logan, you get away from that man! You get over here this instant!”

Jim smiles down at Logan and asks, “Hey, Logan, what is your mom going to do if you don’t get over there?”
He looks up and grins. “She not goin’ to do nothin’.” And then his eyes twinkle and his grin becomes wider.

It turns out he is right. She finally comes apologizing. “I’m sorry he’s bothering you, but you know how three-year-olds are. They just won’t listen to one thing you tell them.”

On a Saturday at a local supermarket, two boys—ages five and seven—have declared war. Like guerrillas on a raiding party, they sneak from aisle to aisle, hiding behind displays and squeaking their tennies on the tile floor. Then suddenly a crash—the result of a game of “shopping cart chicken”—pierces the otherwise calming background music.

The mother, having lost sight of this self-appointed commando unit, abandons her half-filled cart. As she rounds a corner, her screams turn the heads of other shoppers: “Don’t get lost!” “Don’t touch that!” “You—get over here!” She races for the boys, and as she’s about to grab two sweaty necks, they turn to Tactic B: “the split up,” a twenty-first-century version of “divide and conquer.” Now she must run in two directions at once to shout at them. Wheezing with exertion, she corrals the younger one, who just blitzed the cereal section, leaving a trail of boxes. But when she returns him to her cart, the older boy is gone. She locates him in produce, rolling seedless grapes like marbles across the floor.

After scooping up Boy Number Two and carrying him back, you guessed it, she finds that Boy Number One has disappeared. Mom sprints from her cart once more. Finally, after she threatens murder and the pawning of their Nintendo game system, the boys are gathered.

But the battle’s not over. Tactic C follows: the “fill the cart when Mom’s not looking” game. Soon M&Ms, Oreos, vanilla wafers, and jumbo Snickers bars are piled high. Mom races back and forth reshelfing the treats. Then come boyish smirks and another round of threats from Mom: “Don’t do that!” “I’m going to slap your hands!” And in a cry of desperation: “You’re never going to leave the house again for the rest of your lives!”

Frazzled, harried, and broken, Mom finally surrenders and buys off her precious flesh and blood with candy bars—a cease-fire that guarantees enough peace to finish her rounds.
Ah yes, parenting—the joys, the rewards. We become parents with optimism oozing from every pore. During late-night feedings and sickening diaper changes, we know we are laying the groundwork for a lifelong relationship that will bless us when our hair turns gray or disappears. We look forward to times of tenderness and times of love, shared joys and shared disappointments, hugs and encouragement, words of comfort, and soul-filled conversations.

But the joys of parenting were far from the minds of the parents in the previous stories. No freshly scrubbed cherubs flitted through their lives, hanging on every soft word dropping from Mommy’s or Daddy’s lips. Where was that gratifying, loving, personal relationship between parent and child? The sublime joys of parenting were obliterated by a more immediate concern: survival.

This was parenting, the nightmare.

Scenes like these happen to the best of us. When they do, we may want to throw our hands in the air and scream, “Kids! Are they worth the pain?” Sometimes kids can be a bigger hassle than a house with one shower. When we think of the enormous love we pump into our children’s lives and then the sassy, disobedient, unappreciative behavior we receive in return, we can get pretty burned out on the whole process. Besides riddling our lives with day-to-day hassles, kids present us with perhaps the greatest challenge of our adulthood: raising our children to be responsible adults.

Through the miracle of birth, we are given a tiny, defenseless babe totally dependent on us for every physical need. We have a mere eighteen years at most to ready that suckling for a world that can be cruel and heartless. That child’s success in the real world hinges in large part on the job we do as parents. Just thinking about raising responsible, well-rounded kids sends a sobering shiver of responsibility right up the old parental spine. Many of us have felt queasy after a thought such as this: If I can’t handle a five-year-old in a grocery store, what am I going to do with a fifteen-year-old who seems to have an enormous understanding of sex and is counting the days until he gets a driver’s license?
Putting the Fun Back into Parenting

All is not so bleak. Trust us! There’s hope, shining beacon bright, at the end of the tunnel of parental frustration. Parenting doesn’t have to be drudgery. Children can grow to be thinking, responsible adults. We can help them do it without living through an eighteen-year horror movie.

Parenting with Love and Logic is all about raising responsible kids. It’s a win-win philosophy. Parents win because they love in a healthy way and establish control over their kids without resorting to the anger and threats that encourage rebellious teenage behavior. Kids win because they learn responsibility and the logic of life by solving their own problems. Thus, they acquire the tools for coping with the real world.

Parents and kids can establish a rewarding relationship built on love and trust in the process. What a deal! Parenting with Love and Logic puts the fun back into parenting.